

Conserving California's Harvest: Local Government Tools for Farmland Mitigation

You're invited to attend a full training course created for public agencies who are developing or refining farmland mitigation programs. Based on the input from experts in the fields of local governance, agriculture, conservation, law and mitigation, the California Council of Land Trusts has developed this training to assist public agencies and stakeholders to develop, refine, and enhance their farmland mitigation programs. The training will cover best practices developed over the years for farmland mitigation and provide a model farmland mitigation ordinance for use by local governments.

Funding for the source material upon which this course is based was provided by the Department of Conservation's California Farmland Conservancy Program and the Columbia Foundation. The Farmland Mitigation Guidebook Advisory Committee provided valuable insights during the development of the Guidebook.
